Barrington Hills

Heat, the weather and the possibility of a cold change seem to be the main topic of conversation and it is reminiscent at once of all the beautiful swimming pools in Barrington. Each one is different and lovely in its own way. The Halberg's is the largest and quite perfect in its natural way. Then the more ornate ones like the Sloppey, Mrs. Cardwell's, Mrs. Grigsby's, Mrs. Pettensold's, Mrs. Reid's, Mrs. Delaney's, which was built by Mrs. E. Kohlhas when she was Mrs. Marvin Miner is a gem of landscape design surrounded as it is with cypress and redwood trees. The Sloppey and the popular pools are those of Mrs. William D. Horn and Mrs. William Webbe. Mrs. Horn's pool is unique in that it has a wading pool at one end for the children and is inscribed with a dedication in memory of her father George A. Horn. Every afternoon these pools are gathering places for all ages and tend to make the coming generation very water minded and proficient.

In spite of the heat entertainment still goes on. Practically everyone who was lucky enough to be invited to the Jene Haugan's ride and picnics on Saturday night night enjoyed an enthusiastic crowd of spectators a ton too many who gathered to see the cool supper.

Among the last additions to the ever growing population of Barrington are Mr. and Mrs. James Montgomery and their two children Jimmy and Phil. Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery have rented Mme. Hecht's house and eventually plan to live here permanently.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hecht Jr. were here Saturday for the opening of the Barrington Hills swimming pool. Mr. Hecht who is chairman of the house committee, has been in Washington for the last few months working for the administration in time to help dedice the pool are Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Smith who have been at Green Lake, Wis. Mrs. L. G. Halberg who drove to Fish Creek on Monday with Sam and Vall and Mrs. Potter Smith who has been in Cleveland for the last month.

Among those giving dinner parties Saturday evening at the formal opening of Barrington Hills Country Club swimming pool and tennis courts are Harry Howland Visitors to A Century of Progress should be urged to see this marvel of nature which is, indeed, but one more evidence of man's progress, for if the Grass lake lotus beds were not protected they would disappear in the same way as has so much of natural beauty.

We owe gratitude to the men and women who watch over the lotus beds and make it possible to see them with ease, from their very moist.

The whole picture is one of life and motion. The lotus pads lift gently with the wind and rock with the water, a multitude of delicate, lovely blossoms rising and then closing again, swaying in a half-a-dozen species of over the water in pursuit of their insect food. On every post driven among the lotus and on hundreds of the pads-like like the white birds mottled with dusky.

There are three species of the lotus, all of which are found in ponds about Bordentown, N. J.

According to Britton and Brown, our species may be found growing at Grand river, Ontario; in Connecticut river, near Lyman, in Swartz Creek, northern New York, forming a pond, and in the Delaware river below Philadelphia; and locally south to and in Louisiana.

Britton and Brown knew the eastern territory better than the western, but they let us see what the plants of the lotus are like, bringing to the young ones, a moth, beetle, or other dainty, the night before it was overlooked.

The lotus sometimes grows in water six feet deep. In 1924 floods came in June after the lotus had reached its usual height. The plants were submerged for weeks, but when the water receded in the following winter allowed the roots to freeze. It was feared that the beds would never recover their former extent and beauty, but within the past three years they have rapidly increased, and in their present form are now as large as ever.

LICENSE FEE IS JUST

Why did the village board pass an ordinance requiring peddlers (house to house salesmen who carry their wares with them) to take out licenses before doing business in Barrington? Why do the majority of cities and villages require licenses from peddlers or itinerant merchants? Nearly all neighboring municipalities have such ordinances and most of them enforce them.

These ordinances are not municipal tariff walls set up for the purpose of "protecting home industry" as some people may be led to believe.

Instead, peddlers' license ordinance is a warranted means of raising revenue for the municipality. Each and every home-established merchant pays personal property taxes directly and real estate taxes directly or indirectly for the support of his home town school system, his police department, his fire department, etc. It has been estimated that the average Barrington merchant pays $50 annually in personal property tax and $200 annually in real estate tax (if he rents his real estate he pays the landlord the money that is passed on to the tax collector). Out of this total $250 that the average merchant pays, 80 per cent remains in the community for support of local government. It is fair that the local merchant should support his community to this extent.

The local home dweller pays between $75 and $300 per year in taxes directly or indirectly for the privilege of living and rearing a family in Barrington.

With these facts considered, it seems fair that visiting fruit vendors, itinerant bakery wagon owners, and others in the same classification should pay a reasonable amount for the purpose of doing business and making a profit here.

One out of town bakery has signified willingness to pay a license fee while wanting to bargain with the village board for a lower fee than the stipulated $200. Another out of town bakery has been trying to use a technicality which would lift its operations out of the classification of "peddling" and into the classification of "delivering on order." To do this it has obtained the signatures of a number of local residents on cards ordering the bakery to deliver goods regularly. The local citizens who have signed these cards have helped the out of town firm avoid paying a just and warranted tax which should go to help support the municipal fire department, police department, etc. If all local business firms used tricks to avoid paying taxes, the owners of homes would need to pay almost prohibitive taxes to maintain the municipal advantages of the village, and house rents would be higher.

It would be a good idea for Mr. and Mrs. Citizen who buy bread, fruit, or other products from a transient vendor to tell that vendor that he cannot expect any more of his or her trade until he pays the fair fee charged against him.

HE WON'T PAY

We have a hunch that a lot of business firms are declining to pay assessments against them for maintenance of the NRA on grounds that the blue eagle hinders them rather than benefits them and was forced upon them uninvited.

The NRA is receiving some downright refusals to pay for administration costs, but in the majority of cases, dissenters will just sit tight, pay nothing and say nothing.

Charles M. Levy & Sons, precious jewelry producing company of New York notified the administration in no uncertain terms that it would not pay its assessment. The letter to the administration to this effect stated:

"Gentlemen: We are in receipt this morning of an invoice for $100 for a contribution to maintain the code authority in the jewelry industry.

"We have never been notified of any code meetings or organizations. We have never displayed the blue eagle. As a matter of fact, we could not permit the bird to be hung on our walls.

"We have been in business for over 46 years. Up to the time that Mr. Roosevelt was elected, we successfully conducted our jewelry manufacturing business. We did not ask for a partnership with Mr. Roosevelt or the new administration. We would not care to have them as a partner and they have never invested any money in our business.

"We intend, as long as our money is invested in our business, to run it on the same high standards as it has been run in the past. We absolutely refuse to take any advice or direction from the NRA or any of its employees. We do not think that the NRA, who knows nothing about our business, can tell us how to run it.

"Because of the fact that we have never signed away any of our rights either by signing the code or the president's reemployment agreement, we maintain each and every one of our constitutional rights. We deny that the code authority or the government has the right to assess us for $100 to maintain an organization, the principles of which we do not believe in, and which we have never joined.

"You can take this letter as a definite refusal to pay an unwarranted exaction of $100 and this firm will stand $100 to fight the payment of this $100. Since we do not display any blue eagles you cannot order us to give up something we do not display. Any further cause of action on your part to compel us to pay $100 will be resisted by us by maintaining our legal rights.—Charles M. Levy & Son, by Norman C. Norman."

WHAT'S GOING ON

With the president's signature

still fresh on an order directing the postmaster general to investigate foreign air-mail and ocean-mail contracts, the cruiser "Washington," on July 11, dropped a mail pouch containing the order at the Canal zone, and then traveled through the Panama canal. Turning back to the capital came an order to turn the spotlight on Uncle Sam's small contracts. With scant breathing spell came the catapult from R. J. Baker, president of the American steam ship owners' association, who asserted that a reduction of certain small contracts would "force" the majority of the American lines in foreign trade right into bankruptcy. The president has authority under the law to modify or cancel the contracts if he deems it advisable. American steam ship owners insist that the government's insistence that they might lose some of their contracts. Most of the world pays a subsidy to private steamship lines engaged in foreign trade but the United States, due to strong opposition, particularly in the middle west, to payment of subsidies, has not done so. The cost of carrying high rates to American ships for carrying the mails, it was brought out at a Senate investigation that sums paid American steamship companies for carrying some of our ocean mail were extremely large, considering the amount of mail carried.

Fill a second hand bottle with some more liquor, if you must, but don't let Uncle Sam know about it or there may be a $1,000 fine to pay, with maybe two years behind the bars. It's still all right, though, for a few days; but on Aug. 1 the government will be more than offset by the reduced travel, relief costs and the decided gain in living standards for the needy.

Things move with such calm in the naval communications division that it is hard to realize anything covering thousands of miles across the ocean can keep a constant in constant touch with a man. The office from which the messages go is quiet as a rat, road telegraph office in a country-side station. Nothing in its pale walls, its business-like desks or even its equipment apparatus gives a hint of the great distances and replies to come for America and the world, are darling—invincible and practically inaudible—from within its confines. Every now and then during the day or night Colonel Mackie McIntyre, secretary to the president, telephones a message to the division in the navy department buildings to advise an operator turns down. Across thousands of miles that intervene between the white house and the point where the navy cruiser "Houston" is plowing through the sea runs a vibration. And in a matter of minutes the President is hearing the message. It is, thanks to radio, as simple and swift as that.

The success of this year's student aid program financed by the federal emergency relief administration has resulted in a substantial expansion of the project which will bring a college degree within the reach of thousands of needy students and at the same time keep them from the ranks of the unemployed. Aubrey Williams acting federal emergency relief administrator, has announced that

Our Children

By Angelo Patri

Say No

For some time now a mistaken notion of family control has affected the world, especially that part of it which these United States cover. We have always wanted to give children everything possible to make them successful. NO children have ever been given the freedom that ours have enjoyed.

It is this freedom that I want to talk about. Now, if a child on this earth is, or can be free, then it is of us is born that hand and foot to other people, in circumstances and under the laws that bind us securely. Nobody, no power on earth can free us of our duties and obligations and burdens. Many mistakes have been made, and teachers have tried to free children of these obligations of life. The result is hard on the children. It is far kinder to teach a child to know responsibility than to teach him to deny it and then have him come face with it. It is like sending him out to play lions without even a sling shot and a hand full of pebbles.

The only freedom we can hope to give a child is freedom from ignorance. The first step he takes is to learn to walk. This is the first time in from seven to nine months when he reaches the floor board. He falls down in the Bering sea. Feathered Saluki Enjoys Greatest Honor in Persia

Throughout the lonely desert stretches of Persia, the feathered Saluki is held in the highest esteem his ancestors earned in the song, art and verse of the sporting khans of 6000 B. C. Not treated as the despised "dog" the Arabs speak of him as "the Noble" hence indicating the high title "gentleman." He receives careful, full care, stretching himself at ease on the carpet of his master's tent.

With the exception of his long silk ears that reach the corners of his head, the Saluki is the same as the Saluki at first glance resembles the modern greyhound.

He is, however, lighter in build and shorter, with a straight back, presenting in profile almost a perfect square. His extremities and under-body colors are of a reddish tan, while his coat does body, which is golden cream, white, fawn, black, black-and-tan, blue or silver gray. The tail is always white-tipped. His brown, golden or hazel eyes are of great intelligence, bold, intelligent in their expression that is termed "almost human."

He is not to be confused with other oriental greyhounds such as the Barukhiz (Afghan) hounds that are larger, more thick-set, and of sharper appearance, feeding over their entire body with the exception of their tail, almost void of feather and carried like a sabre. Both these breeds are said to be capable of great endurance and speed being able to travel a span of 32 yards per second in spite of the handicap of long tails. Of faithful and gentle dispositions, either is always a valuable companion.—Los Angeles Times.

Croquet an Ancient Game; Roque Calls for Science

The old game of croquet is played on any space 90 by 45 feet. The apparatus consists of eight balls with mallets, two stakes and ten wires. The first three balls are formed by two wires, passing the ball through an arch given the player another turn. Striking an opponent's ball gives player the right to take two shots, or to place ball behind opponent's and strike so as to dislodge it. If he fails, he loses. After he has done this, he is said to be dead on that particular play, and may not repeat this performance until he has sent his ball through an arch. A roque is a ball which has passed the circuit and has not touched the home stake; it may play on every other ball on the field and is not considered dead to any other ball, except that he cannot hit the same ball twice in one turn.

One curious form of the game, called roque, is played on courts 30 by 72 feet, with angles cut off by 8-foot corner pieces. The space is enclosed by heavy timbers, which may be used in making carton shots and in masking the ball. The balls are 3½ inches in diameter and the wickets or arches are only 3½ inches. This is a game for two persons, while croquet may be played by any number up to eight.

Birds Fly Upside Down

Ravens turn somersaults in the course of their aerial sports, for they are playful birds. At the moment of taking wing, they act as if to celebrate the fine foot of the birds' feet under a long crook. The harrier goes into spins while in the air, its body rapidly turning on its axis. As if intoxicated by its complete power over the air, it also indulges in a series of somersaults in masking sensational spiral dives. When snipe are engaged on their court flights, after circling high aloft one will occasionally swoop down to within a few feet of the earth and then turn completely on its back, curving on upside down.

for several hundred feet. Lapwings, in the frenzy of their spring fever, can also perform this extraordinary feat of flying when inverted.

Dalton, Mass.

Dalton, Mass., is a town of natural beauty, and two of its scenic places are Wahconah Falls and Wizard's Glen. According to tradition, the fate of Wahconah, a beautiful Indian girl, who had two lovers, determined the name of the village. One day, her husband was to be executed by a canoe through a rapids a short distance below the falls. If the craft went one side of a sharp rock, which still divides the stream, he would be saved; if on the other side, her husband was to be executed. Yoncongah, Nessucca won, and Wahconah became the queen of the powerful Mohawk tribe.

Mrs. Mary Richter Dies; Pioneer of Fox River Grove

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Richter, long-time resident of this vicinity, were held at Cary Methodist church Saturday afternoon with Rev. Jensen of Cary and Rev. J. C. Miller of Palatine officiating. Burial took place in Cary cemetery and Sutherland Woman's Relief corps conducted services at the grave.

Mrs. Richter died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mayne Mangold of Palatine, Wednesday after having been ill for some time. She had broken a hip and fractured one arm in a fall several weeks ago and had never recovered from the accident.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Mangold and Mrs. Anna Newbold, both in death.

Mrs. Richter was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Opatry, spent her early life on the family farm which is now part of Fox River Grove. Her brother, Edmund Opatry, decided the property would make a desirable location for a suburb of Chicago and founded Fox River Grove.
