DON'T YOU WANT TO VOTE?

American citizens, described by foreigners as the most energetic people on earth, cherish as their greatest possession the freedom and liberty guaranteed by their constitution and representative form of government.

But with the above fact in mind, last Saturday's registration for Cook county voters presents a conundrum.

In the five precincts of Barrington and Palatine townships, there are approximately 3500 eligible voters. In order to exercise their greatest right of liberty and freedom—namely, the right to go to the polls and choose their government representatives—these citizens must register at their respective polling places. This fact has been placed before them in the newspapers, on display cards and dodgers, and by election workers. It is a safe guess that at least 90 per cent of the citizens in this corner of Cook county knew they had to register to retain the right to vote.

In spite of their renowned American energy, their love of liberty, and their knowledge of the fact that they must register if they vote, nearly two-thirds of these citizens stayed away from the registration booth last Saturday. And there lies the conundrum.

Like the pre-school child, Mr. Citizen will be given a second chance. The first registration day is passed. Next Tuesday, Oct. 9, will be the second and last—Mr. Citizen's last chance to be a 100 per cent patriot this year. The registration booths will open at 6 a. m. and remain open until 9 p. m. Those men and women who pass up the second chance to register, will not vote on November 6. The fact that they have lived in the same precinct (or the same house) does not make any difference in Barrington and Palatine townships. The law requires that every citizen residing in rural Cook county who votes must re-register every two years.

IT HAD TO FAIL

To those who have observed the trend of NRA affairs, the recent resignation of General Hugh S. Johnson as administrator was not surprising. For many months dissen- sion among officials of the organization, and between it and other government departments, has been increasing, and for some time it has been evident that the breaking point would soon be reached.

There is no denying that General Johnson has worked hard to make the NRA a success, although his arrogance and arbitrary methods have at times antagonized many whose full cooperation was essential to the achievement of its objectives.

In the minds of many, Johnson's withdrawal means that the NRA, as the country has known it since its inception, is in a state of collapse. For Johnson was the NRA.

The present situation is probably correctly described by the eminent journalist, Frank R. Kent, writing in the Baltimore Sun, one of the country's leading independent democratic newspapers, who says:

"The truth about NRA is that it is too sick to be cured. But the New Deal high command would rather die than admit this. Ballyhooed to unmanageable proportions, it began to collapse six months ago, and is today in a very bad mess. Failed of its objectives, with its personnel shot to pieces, its more important men anxious to get from under, its policies lost in the shuffle, its prestige gone, and its organization in a state of confusion, it appears a wreck."—Marcy D. Darnall.

FIRE PREVENTION

During each year the public is called upon to observe so many special weeks, in furtherance of this or that movement, that as a rule comparatively little attention is paid to any of them. A few of them, however, are worthy of more than passing notice. Among these is Fire Prevention Week, to be observed this year between October 7 and 13.

Fire losses in the United States have reached staggering figures with respect to both life and property. About 15,000 Americans are burned to death each year, while the property loss is approximately 500 million dollars on an average. A slight improvement has been made in recent years, but the toll is still many times what it would be if reasonable precautions were taken to prevent fires.

Even those who do not suffer from fire directly are really called upon to bear a portion of the losses, through higher insurance rates, higher taxes and lost business.

Every citizen should cooperate in the spread of information regarding fire prevention and control, as well as adopt every possible means for preventing fire on his own premises. He should do this not only during Fire Prevention Week but every week.

WHAT'S GOING ON

IN WASHINGTON

(Courtesy The United States News)

Early Wednesday the president's special rolled in the union station. On the back platform the smiling figure, arrayed in a straw hat and linen suit, appeared, waved to the little gathering watching through the iron bars of the concourse. A few hours later the president was at his desk. It was, obviously, not a little liked by the storm of questionnaires which had descended upon him like the autumn leaves that covered the boardwalks. He indicated that he could not possibly answer them all, so he would answer none. And that one from the Chamber of Commerce, compiled at a meeting just a stone's throw across the avenue, he said, reminded him somewhat of the lawyer who asked of a witness on the stand: "Have you stopped beating your wife?"

The president stated at his conference with the press on Friday that the government was still considering a third or judicial branch for the NRA organization which would have to do with enforcement including labor settlements through judicial means and code practices through judicial means. This branch is still in the discussion stage, however, and in the meantime the administrative board will have supervision of any quasi-judicial functions.

A business news is provided with a new guide-post to watch when seeking to follow the industrial policies of the new deal. That post will be distinguished by the views and statements of Donald Randall Richberg, director of the industrial emergency committee. Mr. Richberg has emerged from the recent hectic weeks of uncertainty as the Super-General Johnson. Not only is he the prospective guide of the NRA policy, but through him are to be coordinated the industrial, agricultural, labor and the relief policies of the government. Such is the meaning read by Washington officials into the events that finally have led to a reorganization of NRA administration and to the amplification of broad powers for the industrial emergency committee.

Mr. Richberg took notice of criticisms that business was inadequately represented in the leadership of the revised NRA so far the press on Friday in a statement to the effect that the changes of policy would be discouraged. He also made it plain that the policy committee, on which so-called new dealers predominate, would not interfere with the administration of the NRA.

No one has ever hijacked a shipment of money from a United States mint. What's more, they never will. If Uncle Sam's money collectors have anything to say about it, and they have plenty to say. Right now, while the biggest transfer of gold in history is going on, federal efficiency in moving money is getting its most severe test, and passing with flying colors, to date. August pages were not a stroke of good luck. Rather, it was the result of weeks and weeks of the most careful planning. And as more shipments move from San Francisco to Denver, every few days the same well-oiled machinery continues to work with the same efficiency. By the time tanker drivers are the rage, Denver will be the world's largest storehouse of gold.

When the silver purchase act was passed last spring many representatives and senators claimed that it would raise the world price of silver. This, they said, would be a great boon to China, where silver is made the basic metal.

It seems, however, that it is not at all pleasing to China. Present all-time high prices for silver in the world markets are the cause of great concern to the Chinese government. Their protests have been growing louder as the months roll by.

Last August the Chinese finance minister addressed a note to President Roosevelt asking him to clarify the silver policy of the American government. Last week, the Chinese minister in Washington, Alfred So, was instructed by his government to express China's protest and to request an answer to the previous note.

China has intimated that it may be forced to change from a silver to a gold standard if the United States continues its world buying. China is finding it difficult to get her normal supply of silver because of export restrictions in the price of silver the last few weeks.

People that often, Youth and childhood, as well, are not so stiff in their emotional joints as you are. They can adapt and adjust and begin anew when you could not. Their emotions have not the roots yours have as a general thing. Such wounds as they receive are easier healed than your own. Don't accent the emotions you feel.

Have you seen a happy child begin to cry after one look at his mother's face? Haven't you seen a cheerful child become suddenly downcast and even sullen after a glance at his mother's countenance? I have. Emotions are easily transferred to children. They have enough of their own without any of yours added. And they must be protected from your own over-stimulated moods. Why not let the children have their emotions first hand? They get along better with them if you do.

Used for Food

The ostrich, it has been found, is valuable for more than feathers. A great many are kept only for their feathers, being seasonally plucked as sheep are sheared. Others are used for food. The flesh, especially if the young are fed, is of the poultry foods, is similar to that of the turkey. The eggs, too, are edible. Also the bird is a source of penicillin.

GRIST

MILL

By Clarence Miller

What I'd Do If—

I'd compel every woman to laugh at her husband's jokes—no matter how stupid.

There'd be the electric chair for the heel who puffs garlic in your face.

Mae West would get a medal for not smoking or drinking.

Alarm clocks would be taboo—save when off for a picnic.

"Diddle" ever hear the story of the travelling salesman and the farmer's daughter," would go in cold storage for at least a century.

Professional crepe hangers would be forced to eat green persimmons, daily.

Women wouldn't be allowed to talk about their "operation" oftener than twice a week.

Cats would do their courting by the theatres that run pictures harmful to children would be blackballed.

Grown-up ladies of try-and-guess are disporting themselves astride bicycles on the sidewalk in their shortest shorts as a dramatic gesture to attract the attentions of men would also have to display pretty faces, to match.

Europe would fight its wars with its own men and munitions.

Omit Spanish bull fights.

Those who torture dogs and horses would be made to wear horse-hair collars.

Everybody could live five years, if he chose.

More income for the farmer, less cost to the consumer.

In lieu of presenting a cash arrest slip for speeding cars, I would just give you a "good laugh" out.

I'd permit women in automobiles and gingham to "rake the meadow rich with hay," and mix with the public from 5 to 9 p. m. each week day and from 7 to 9 p. m. on Saturday.

I'd assign Mae West to knock the far east of the guys who indulge in the pastime of beating up their wives.

The grocer wouldn't add the weight of the holes in Swiss cheese.

I'd cancel the British debt with the provision that every European Englishman would promise to "catch on" to American ways within 24 hours after they are spanned.

Warren Bronchos Unable to Check Speedy Blue Devil Back

Ponies Lose Opening Game

Palatine by Score of 15 to 0

The Warren Blue Devils came to town Friday and were met with the Bronchos' scalp.

A score of an 18 to 0 victory Warren gliders surprised the local boys in the first minute of play when they put on a touchdown.

From then on Barrington appeared discouraged and just could not seem to function.

The defeat, however, was not bad as the score indicates. Warren won all of its touchdowns, the result of long runs, and the game was fairly even the rest of the time. This is shown by the fact that Warren made only three touchdowns to Barrington's three.

Zimmerman, Fallback, and very early man, started for Warren. The Bronchos' tacklers failed to hold him most of the time. It slipped through to make Warren's three touchdowns, or in the third, Phillips, a freshman halfback, ran 44 yards in the fourth quarter to make the fourth touchdown.

Loss of experience in the back field was one of the reasons for the defeat. However, the line was not spending up the holes as usual. With more experience the team should show improvement.

This week Coach Clark is working on blocking and tackling. The team is in the back field for the first time in the season. It is to be played at Lorton Park, Lorton, the largest school in the conference, always has a good game. Last Friday it beat Fall River, 26 to 0, and Palatine beat Warren 7 to 2. It will be a very tough game for the Bronchos. The Bronchos' left tackle, will be in for the game, as he is working to work or two.

Henderson's point made their debut of 1934 by leading 13 to 0 on last Monday to the Palatine second team at Northfield. This being their first game of the year, the second should give a little experience. However, Stout and Roth did some work in the backfield for Barrington. Coach Henderson plans to have his squad in good shape in time for the Warren game to be played at Warren next Wednesday.
