TO BE LIKED, YOU MUST LIKE OTHERS

TO BE LIKED, YOU MUST LIKE OTHERS

I am interested in Robert Quillen's view that almost anybody of ordinary intelligence can be popular. All you have to do, he explains, "is to like people."

"Did you ever see a charming person with a cold and unfriendly eye?" he inquires. "I am sure you haven't. Those who seem charming are the ones who seem to like you.

"As a general rule, you will find people willing to meet you half way and troat you as well as you treat them. They are willing to like you if you give no offense, and thus you begin with the seed of popularity already planted. All you need do is encourage it a little bit and let it develop by natural processes.

"Most people spoil things by talking too much. "Most people spoil things by talking too much. In thoughtless conversation with one friend, they make rather catty remarks about another. And the person talked about eventually hears what was said and feels hurt. It may nake an enemy of him, but he never again will believe that you like him and never again will believe that you like him and never again will selve that you like him and never again will selve that you like him and never again will believe that

"Everybody wishes to be liked. And most people will repay you generously if you like them and prove it by not making nasty cracks about them."—Mason City, Ia., Globe-

BUSINESS CHALLENGED BY CO-OPS

The man who is always trying to get something for nothing generally winds up by being somebody's sucker, and finds himself laying out more than he can afford in the belief that he is buying the postoffice building.

What alis him, however, is simply a magnification of that undying Yankee insistence on getting all that the law allows for his money. The American is a bargain hunter; hot or cold, he isn't happy unless he feels that his dollars are giving him 100 cents' worth of effort every time he sends them to market.

It is this trait which lies back of the old complaints against trusts and middlemen, and which has furnished the motive power for growth of the co-operative movement in the more operatives and found that they are entrenching themselves all across the land.

Farmers have gone in for co-operative elevators, oil companies, fertilizer distributors, and feed stores. Co-operative growen have gone in for co-operatives have gone in for co-operative serves have gone in for serves have gone in the serves have gone in the serves have panies, fertilizer distributors, and feed stores. Co-operative grocery stores have sprung up in many places. Along with these has come the credit union, providing customer-owned banking facilities.

All these things present a challenge to business and Carried far enough, the co-operative movement could Carried far enough, the co-operative movement could strike a terrific blow at our retail trade set-up. The chain stores have never begun to pinch the small merchant as the co-operatives would pinch him if they once really began to flourish. Wholesalers in any lines would be equally squeezed. Even some of the manufacturing industries would feel the

In the growth of the co-operatives, then, the business man can see an unfolding threat to his well-being. And the only way for him to meet it is to recognize this undying American fondness for bargains, this inbred insistence on making a dollar go just as far as the Constitution will let

In other words, people in the long run are going to trade where they get the most for their money. And if the cooperatives are rising to put a cloud over business, it is up to business to fight fire with fire; to redouble its efforts to fur-mish 100 cents worth of value for every dollar of expenditure. There is no reason to believe that business will be un-able to meet this challenge. The efficiency and productive power which have placed such things as automobiles, electric ice-boxes; and rudios within the reach of ordinary wage-earners on a scale not dreamed of in any other country ought to make private initiative pay its way for a long time to com--Philipsburg, Pa., Daily Journal,

PIKE'S PEAK ADVERTISED

If you sometimes doubt that advertising pays, remember that there are 26 mountains in Colorado higher than Pike's Peak. Can you name them? Neither can we. Pike's Peak has been given publicity and plenty of it, so it gets all the business, and other mountains just sit—or whatever mountains do—and complain that business is punk. Don't let your business suffer from lack of advertising. Make it a Pike's Peak. Charling Lows Herall-Particit Peak.—Chariton, Iowa, Herald-Patriot.
