Table Talk By GRACE ARCHBOLD "What is the trouble now?" said Miss Dade to herself, as glancing from the window, she saw Bobby Jones starting off to school, crying very bitterly.

Another thing, Miss Dade continued, "None of us are supposed to make any remark one way or the other about the food. It is a great temptation when something is especially good. But John says a little child often gets the suggestion of dislike by way of contrast, so it is better to wait until the meal is finished before expressing pleasure. This rule is not hard to follow, but we do try to conform to it."

"You see, it's like this, Miss Dade. The children behave so badly at meals, especially at breakfast, that I'm always having to scold them. They interrupt Dad and me when we are talking. They don't like this and won't eat that. All together our meals are very unpleasant. I do not know what to do about it. Your sister's children nearly always look contented and happy. I wonder how she manages."

"Well, for one thing, Nan is very particular (what we talk about at breakfast and, indeed, at all meals). She thinks this very important. She says, when the conversation is bright and cheerful, food digests better. I suppose it does. So we make a point of not discussing anything unpleasant at the table. Each member of the family has more or less acquired the habit of contributing something pleasant and interesting. We look forward to mealtime at Nan's because it is sure to be a good time. The children seldom interrupt when others are speaking. They know it is bad manners. Of course, sometimes it is hard for them to wait, but Nan sees to it that all have a chance to express themselves, for of course it would be unfair not to give each a turn. We ask them about their school work and laugh at their little jokes; we really enjoy their wholesome fun."

Each was presented with a very lovely gift. Department officers present were: Mrs. Elvora Foster, department secretary; Mrs. Anna Broadway, past officer of the executive board, all of Palestine.

The hostesses for the day were Mrs. Jahnke, chairman, Mrs. Herman Kuhlman, Mrs. Henry Sasse, Mrs. Arnold Sasse, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. A. C. Calhoun.

Scouts of the Northwest Council Lay Plans for Summer Camp Opening

A great deal of enthusiasm is being shown by scouts and scouters of the Northwest Suburban Council for the summer season of Camp Oh-Da-Ko-Ta which will open for the scouts of this council at Dyer Lake near Slides Corners, Wis. June 28.

Due to the fact that the opening of camp has been postponed from June 21 to June 28, the open houses for scouts, scouters, parents and friends of scouting will be held June 21 instead of June 14 as previously announced. However, anyone who desires may visit camp June 14 as some of the staff will be there.

It is preferred, however, to have visitors June 21 as the camp will be in full operation.
