LET'S BE CAREFUL

World war veterans who are tempted to blow their bonus money in reckless extravagance should remember the incident of 1931. By the veterans act of that year they were enabled to borrow up to one-half of their adjusted compensation certificates at 4 1/2 per cent interest.

RAILROAD'S ANSWER

This American citizen used to travel by railroad whenever he went anywhere, for the very good reason that there was no other way of getting there. In the fullness of time, however, automobiles and buses were placed at his disposal, and then he made an interesting discovery.

He found that if he used one or the other of these conveyances he could get where he was going for less money than he would have to pay the railroads to carry him.

Passenger trains that used to run regularly in two and three sections started running in one. Local trains died pitifully among the rolling hills and grassy plains of the rural districts.

A few years ago certain western and southern roads began to meditate on the American's fondness for bargains, and decided that if cheap travel was what the citizen wanted, cheap travel was what he would have.

What happened was enlightening. Travel by train began to increase again. With it, in spite of the lower rates, rose passenger train incomes.

Business goes to the man who sells the most for the least. This holds good for railroads just as it does for other lines of business.

WHERE CAN YOUNG PEOPLE LOCATE?

An editorial writer for an Illinois weekly newspaper discussed recently the continuance of education for those high school students who are graduated in small towns this and next month.

The young folks, themselves, he concluded, should be the ones to determine their future course. Those who could financially afford it were urged to attend college as a further preparation for earning their way in life.

Another problem that arises at this time of year, every year, but of more concern during the recent depression years, is where the graduate from a small town who is finishing either high school or college and is ready to begin work will find opportunity for earning a livelihood.

This is not only a personal concern of the young people but it is of deep interest to those persons who have enough public spirit to want to see their community progress.

In the past years, there have been too few opportunities for the young people in the small cities and this lack of opportunity has sent too many high school and college graduates who were reared in the rural communities and towns into the big cities.

Private initiative has not solved this problem in the past. Since the government has become more concerned within the last few years in a planned society and has announced an interest in the small communities here is a place to start. Young people who are ready to settle into a job and to start at home are a real asset to any small community, and most communities need more of them.—Grayville, Ill., Mercury-Independent.

IT'S SIMPLER HERE

If you are one of those who think that our American party system is too old-fashioned and ought to be reduced to a mere designation of liberals as opposed to conservatives, consider for a moment the situation in France.

There, in the recent elections, the people were faced with a lineup that would baffle the most astute political student. They were required to choose, somehow, from Communists, Dissident Communists, Radical Socialists, Independent Socialists, Dissident Socialists, and just plain Socialists. Left Republicans, Right Republicans, Popular Democrats and Conservatives.

Fortunately, our system is not yet as involved as that of France. But the increasing number of "isms" we have faced in the last 10 years is a warning.

We might in time become as hopelessly tangled up in our voting as the French. That would mean to us just what it has meant to France—ever-changing government.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN WASHINGTON

(Courtesy The United States News)

Out into the hands of 3,100,000 veterans go bonds, immediately exchangeable into cash, totaling about two billion dollars—the greatest single increase in purchasing power ever placed in the hands of consumers at one point of time.

The treasury thus brings to completion its gigantic task of distributing the soldiers' bonus, mailing out the bonds and providing post offices with the cash by which to pay them.

There is an incentive for veterans to retain their bonds until 1945 instead of turning them into money. It is payment of 3 per cent annually on face value.

Some of the less, the country's post offices stand ready to deliver the full cash value of the bonds, thereby permitting the flow of money into the channels of trade and industry.

What branches of business will feel most the quickening influence of the new demand for goods? The American Legion has made a survey, on the basis of which it reports expectations as follows: In percentage of total disbursements: To liquidate debts—31.4.

For acquisition or repair of homes—24.5.

For savings, education and investments—8.

For furniture and household equipment—7.8.

For automobiles and trucks—6.2.

To extend further the nation's network of highways for the next two years, congress clears the way toward the expenditure of half a billion dollars, most of which is matched by a like amount of state funds.

The enabling measure, an amendment to the federal highway act of 1916, lacks only house approval of a conference report and signature by the president.

No money is actually appropriated, but when the secretary of agriculture approves any project submitted by an interested party, he commits the federal government to the expenditure.

How much of the money may be laid out in each of the two years if the maximum amounts authorized are called for (figures run in millions of dollars): For regular highways—125.

For highways in national forest lands, parks, and other federal land—34.

For highways approaching or connecting national parks and national monuments—10.

Government jobs to political victors or to those who qualify under standardized tests—that is an issue which raises its head again both in the 74th congress about to end and in the presidential campaign about to begin.

In congress, the O'Mahoney-La Follette bill, gathering up the provisions of seven or eight other civil service measures now in congress, is introduced into the senate and the president is asked to make it a "must" measure.

It would place postmasterials under the rules of the civil service commission, effective January 1, 1938. In addition, some 150,000 other positions would be brought under the classification, although it exempts emergency agencies.

Justification assigned for exemptions is that civil service rules by their very nature are not applicable to many conspicuously able persons merely because they failed to have the formal qualifications called for by the commission.

The issue enters the presidential campaign at the dramatic insistence of republican presidential nominee Landon, who in effect, personally amends the platform to demand that republican presidential candidates be chosen on a formal merit basis except cabinet members and their assistants.

A two-year story of enforcing a policy of "let the seller beware" is told by the securities and exchange commission in the records up to its second birthday.

The SEC is the agency set up to see that security issues offered to the public are not misrepresented in sales literature and that security salesmen and traders on exchange do not market their wares by fraudulent means.

Disbanding of five stock exchanges under investigations into their ways of doing business.

Five proceedings now under way to suspend members of exchanges for alleged "market rigging."
