

Presence of Red Spider Explained by Master Gardener

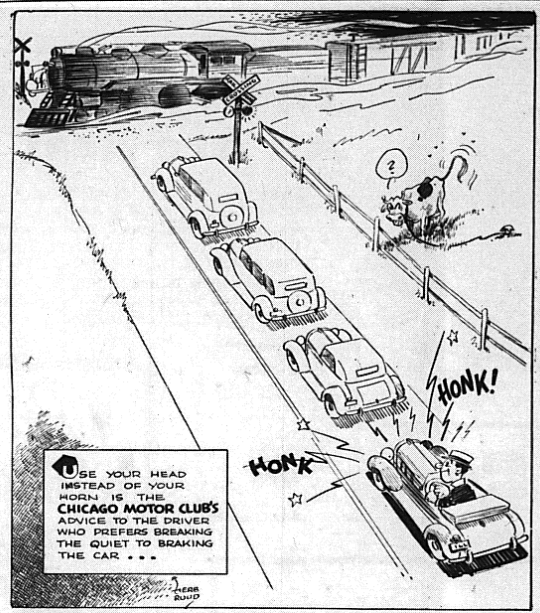

If the foliage on your evergreens begins to take on a rusty color during the hot dry summer weather, it may indicate that they are infested with red spider. The red spider is a sucking insect and is responsible for a reduction in the vitality of infested plants. The insects themselves are so tiny that it is extremely difficult to discern them with the naked eye, but the presence of red spider is often indicated by the small white webs on the tree, and if a white paper is held beneath a branch and the branch shaken vigorously, the tiny red spiders may be distinguished on the white background.

This pest cannot withstand moisture, and one of the best and simplest remedies is to spray the tree with a strong stream of water, which will dislodge and kill the spiders. Be sure to wet the under side of the foliage also. Other good remedies are spraying with a glue spray, or dusting with dusting sulphur.

Remember that the roots of evergreens require that they be kept moist and cool in summer. A mulch of peat moss is very helpful in this respect.

Water your evergreens well in summer—not necessarily often, but deeply when you do water them. It is best water in the later afternoon or evening, letting the hose run slowly around the base of each tree until the ground is saturated to a depth that will reach the deepest roots.

Resolution

Whereas, Almighty God in His infinite wisdom has removed from our midst our dear friend and President, John C. Plage, who passed away on June 23, 1935; and Whereas, it is the desire of the board of directors to note in its records a tribute to the splendid life and outstanding accomplishments of John C. Plage, and its sincere appreciation of his years of sympathetic contact and helpful guidance as an active and energetic member of this board of directors; and Whereas, his ideals, his uprightness and integrity in all of his dealings with his fellow men, and his splendid character, have left an indelible impress upon all those with whom he came in daily contact.

Now therefore, be it resolved that, valuing the service and appreciating the ability of John C. Plage, we do give formal expression of our affection for him. We shall miss his able counsels and his admirable personal qualities; but his memory shall abide;

That, grieving at his passing, we hereby preserve as a lasting record our love and esteem for him and express to members of his family our sympathy in their bereavement.

That this resolution be entered in the permanent records of the bank and that a copy hereof be sent to his family.

COOL Comfortable

A well insulated house is cool and comfortable on the hottest days. Likewise, it is economical to heat in cold weather.

Insulation keeps heat out in summer and in winter, paying for itself in a short time.

Here are a few dependable forms of insulation which we will be glad to explain to you:

ZONOLITE or THERMOFIL—This style is easily poured into place.

CELOTEX-WALLBOARD—Is laid in slabs under roof or over ceiling.

RED TOP WOOL—(or rock wool) is placed between rafters or joists.

METALATION—(aluminum foil on paper) to be placed over rafters and joists.
