Herman C. Bohnstengel Announces

HERMAN C. BOHNSTENGEL wishes to announce the application of his name to the store for men that has been under his active management now for many months, formerly known as Fordrecher. Herman was associated with the late Joseph Fordrecher in the conducting of the store for over twenty years. Now in the course of events, he has assumed complete interest and will henceforth conduct the store in his own name.

As one of the leading clothing stores for men in Elgin and northern Illinois, Herman's has an interesting background and heritage of dependability. The store was originally established in 1876, sixty years ago, by the D. J. Chamberlain Company and was known to many as the "Big Boston." At a later date, the business was acquired by Joseph Fordrecher and was operated under his name at the original location, corner of DuPage street and South Grove avenue until 1934. In that year Herman moved the store into its present modern quarters at 11 South Grove avenue. The policy has ever been consistent with highest quality, nationally advertised and approved merchandise at the lowest possible prices. The same service will be continued in every respect.

And now starting at 8:30 o'clock, Thursday morning, July ninth, Herman gives to the public the finest of merchandise, all regular stock, at amazingly low prices to celebrate in a great
