Unusual Accident Takes Two Lives

Two men are dead as a result of injuries received in a motor vehicle accident which occurred on South State road and took place three miles south of Palestine, Monday afternoon. The fact that there were no witnesses to the accident and conditions arising from it led to the unusual.

The men killed were Jacob Fay, 1413 Millard avenue, Chicago, a medical salesman, who had been covering the territory for several years, and Louis Benker of Niles, an employee of the freight department of the Milwaukee railroad.

Benker's body was found about 65 feet from the scene of the crash in a ditch at the southeast corner of the intersection. The body was about 15 feet from his car, which had not been overturned.

Benker's body was found near the scene of the crash in a ditch at the southeast corner of the intersection. The body was about 15 feet from his car, which had not been overturned.

The accident, as reconstructed by County Officer Peter Krakowak, from the statements of the wrecked cars, was caused by the two cars crashing together on the intersection. Fay was apparently going south on Plum Grove road and Benker was heading east on route 84. Apparently both drivers were trying to swerve out of the front of him stop at the intersection, the doctor also stopped. Both men were dead when Dr. Wolfarth reached them and Benker's car was resting upon the body. Dr. Wolfarth went to the scene of the accident and notified county highway police.

Officer Krakowak testified at the inquest that some farmer named Proff had called the police and that he had been unable to find him as yet. Benker and both men attended the inquest at Arlington Heights, Tuesday morning.

Arlington Heights Man Released From Manleasher Suit

Walter Lewis, North State road, Arlington Heights, was released from a charge of manleashing in original court to Cook county February 17 last.

Mr. Lewis was driving a car on North State road which struck William Schuett, who was crossing the road. His way home, Mr. Schuett died in the Palestine Community hospital six weeks later.

The case had been held after largely through the efforts of the Village and Officer Hebb, who recently resigned from the Arlington Heights police department. It was reported.

The defense of Mr. Lewis was handled by Attorney Frank P. Talbot of the Prairie who attributed the injury to Mr. Schuett as having been careless.

Car Scout Troop Is Re-Organized

Troop 166 of the Car Scout boys was re-organized last week with Dale Gray, scoutmaster, and John Laszaky, assistant scoutmaster. George Sedwick, secretary, and Robert Narrows, quartermaster, are also members.

The scout chapter was organized and their parents and other members of the Morning Star community of the village had which was held in the village hall on the Black Hawk area. R. L. Warren, field executive of Woodstock, and Howard Allen, attorney, gave instructive and interesting talks to those present on scout activities. The scout chapter is preparing.

Ancestor of Automobile The Steam Carriage Useful inventions frequently get the credit of the world. The ancestor of the automobile is a writer in the town of Warwick, Rhode Island, who made its invention a century ago when Dr. Goldsworthy Gurney, a British surgeon, gave up his lucrative practice to devote his time and energy to the perfection of a steam carriage. By 1825, he had developed his invention to the extent that he was able to journey from London to Bath and back at the rate of six miles an hour. His efforts to make this sort of vehicle an object of convenience on the road received a rude shock when his bill was introduced in parliament. He still bravely taking such vehicles by horse-drawn stage for some years.

"Blackmailing" in China When a Chinese man is near 70, his parents initiate the fact of his old age. Traditionally, one who has passed his 70th birthday is honored with a list of gifts. One who considers a thing like that, which is a gift, then talks with the young men, some of whom are the young women, as well as the wife. He asks them to write down his acceptance and the date. The same principle was used in the 21st century lamp which was in general use before the electric lamp replaced them.

January Building Indicates Activity for Suburban Area

Suburban building makes a fine "top-down" for 1927 with a January increase over last year of $1 per cent. The figure being $1,747,417 for January, 1927, as against $1,727,411 for January, 1926.

It is the most encouraging fact about the great improvement that it cannot be accounted for by an over-all increase in unusual size. The falls over January 1926 in the proportion of the building throughout practically the entire country with the greatest advance indicated in the North Shore suburban cities of Evanston, Skokie, Northbrook and Winnetka and in the South Shore suburbs of Oak Park, Oak Brook, Gage and Hammond.

The increase may be accounted for in a measure at least with permits totaling $10,000 being issued by Herman Garbach, building commissioner, in January. A permit for an addition to the Parkview residence for $1660 was issued to Mrs. E. H. Bredinger, 104 Broadway, Evanston, and a permit for a residence at 411 Hillside avenue owned by Mrs. E. H. Bredinger, 104 Broadway, Evanston, was issued to Mrs. H. Walburn.

The January total of $1,569,000 reflects the usual seasonal decline from the $1,816,000 of the year before than the expected fall of January, there being almost invariably the poorest month for new building. The fact that the total for the month is still up to the starting of much building which otherwise would have been deferred until the advent of better conditions for construction.

Although considerable industrial buildings appear in the January survey, the construction of new home accounts for 45 per cent of the total. New homes to the number of 103 and valued at $1,124,416 were reported and all but one were under way. The total of $1,049,007 for home construction.

New books for adults

"Mama Minerva." Kautzer; "Treaty On Case." Bentley; "Portrait of a Lady." Smith; "Lost Wages." Trevis; "Grey Street of the Plating Cat." Jones; "Spotlight." Kottel; "The Growing Old Gracefully." Courtney; "Mama's Worldly Goods." Hatcher; "Flame in the Country." Parkman.

Two mystery books for boys and girls

"Secret of the Chained Tree." Maguire; "Pirates Offshoot." Swann.

World literature always interesting to read about. In the library are two books on wild animals and one particularly devoted to reptiles. (Of course there are many others, but too many to list.)

"Wild Life of Our World." by Crowland, old gives excellent information about the habits and modes of life of wild animals.

"Wild Beasts Today." by Stephens, gives a vivid account of the catching, transporting and destruction of wild animals and the work of conserving the rare species in parks and zoological gardens. It is a fascinating book for all.

"Book of Living Reptiles." by Maize and Carter. Did you know there are more than can glide as fast as man can run? That some reaver climb trees some swim while others burrow through the sand? Yes, and the crocodiles in South America grow to be two feet thick and dine on wild pig!

This and much more is told in this excellent account of reptiles.

JUDICIAL REFORM OR SABOTAGE?

For 150 years under a written constitution the American people have worshipped at the altar of sportsmanship.

They have accepted the doctrine that it is fundamentally unjust to refuse to respect an adverse decision.

For generations the supreme court of the United States has been the umpire in deciding what are the rights and valid acts of the executive and legislative branches of the government within the meaning of the supreme law of the land—the Constitution.

There has been a recognized and well-defined difference between the judicial procedure and tampering with the personnel or judgment of the supreme court itself.

In the few instances where attempts have been made to control the supreme court, an outraged public opinion has risen in protest.

President Roosevelt's message to congress, composed purely as a piece of judicial reform, has so many obvious defects that it is not surprising that it has been so widely disputed by persons who are familiar with the actual truth about the alleged congestion in the work of the supreme court, that it would be most fortunate if it were not.

It is to be concluded that the message itself was merely a pretext or excuse to cover a direct attempt to punish the present members of the supreme court for their temerity in rendering constitutional decisions.

It is curious that to impugn the good faith of a presidential policy however well-intentioned may be the motive of the president himself. But it is always the duty of the press of this free country to expose the defects of any system of government occasioned by a president's bold assertion of political power.

Mr. Roosevelt's hostility to the present membership of the supreme court has been known when, on the day after the NRA was declared unconstitutional by a unanimous vote of all nine justices, liberal and conservative alike, he exhibited a surprising pinch. This, and the fact that the NRA was a measure of the same campaign, was abandoned because public opinion voiced nation-wide disapproval. Millions of congressmen in the democratic party voted for Mr. Roosevelt.

Not a word did Mr. Roosevelt say during the last campaign about his plans to change the number of justices on the supreme court. He refused to answer the challenge of the conservative press, and he was not asked to do so. The message that they gave him, Mr. Roosevelt evidently has concluded now that they were a blast of wind, and he did not mention in his speeches.

The president would be right in assuming that the American people are not beyond the grasp of leadership, but he cannot by any stretch of the imagination assume justly that they gave him a mandate to undermine the strength of our judicial system or to impair its effectiveness.

What objection, it will be naively asked by many, can there be to a simple increase in the number of justices of the supreme court, especially if it is to be done by the simple majority of congress and fairly in the American way. If life tenure were secured by law, it is wrong, if 70 to 70 should be the compulsory requirement of congress, it is wrong. If it is to be done by simple majority to pass upon that particular question directly.

Modern compromises call for a constant infusion of new blood into the courts, and if states have recognized it by providing in their constitutions for compulsory retirement of aged judges.

The lesson is clear. There is anything wrong with the life tenure of judges. It means less to change it through an amendment to the federal constitution itself as we have done in the states. George Washington warned us against "amendments to the constitution by popular ratification."

There is no better way to preserve our democratic processes than to let the people decide whether they want the system of choosing justices of their own treatment.—The United States Review.

Telephone Jeopardy early in 117 of the 187 cases presented for review last year.

In the halcyon days of 1933 President Roosevelt recognized that a long-range plan of public works was needed to stimulate the economy, assuming for his regular 1936 year conference, were quickly hurried into the streets.

In 1931, when the emergency conference of congress determined that all construction agencies should be reauthorized for another year in order to carry out the program for construction over a six-year period.

One leader, reporters were sure that the president had the answer to that vital question. What can be done about an amendment to the constitution—to modify the court's jurisdiction in the matter that congress and the executive want to take?

In his January 9 message to congress, Roosevelt stated that he would like to see the constitution amended to provide for a permanent judicial conference.

One leader, reporters were sure that the president had the answer to that vital question. What can be done about an amendment to the constitution—to modify the court's jurisdiction in the matter that congress and the executive want to take?

What he proposed caught the attention of the press, and it was not long before the subject was being discussed in the streets.
