Delinquent Village Water Accounts Up; Shut-Offs Planned

Delinquent water accounts again drew the attention of village trustees this week and a plan of procedure to force payment was adopted. The matter was brought up at an adjourned meeting last Friday night.

C. A. Burandt, village clerk, has been sending out five day notices to delinquents in accordance with action made by Trustees. Delinquent accounts are being collected by Koerber Jr. and seconded by Trustee John H. D. Blanke. The letter urges payment of bills in order to forestall legal action or other methods of collection.

Clerk Burandt had reported to the board that delinquencies were upwards of $3000 and the revenue was needed in the combined sewer and water accounts to meet current interest payments on bonds.

Included in the figure of $3000 were delinquent sewer rental charges. A majority of the accounts were current bills of one or two periods.

Following the issuance of letters, the board instructed Paul Purcell, superintendent of street and water, to enforce the shut-off rule for such water delinquencies.

The angle between the true north and the magnetic north is called the "magnetic variation," and has to be allowed for in navigation. Thus, when the song says "True as the compass to the star," it is talking nonsense because, although the star is fixed, the compass is not. Nevertheless, its variations are well known, so that the compass remains the seaman's most valuable possession.

Libertyville Police Catch "Horse Thief" But Do Not Hang Him

Simultaneously with the opening of the Libertyville Exposition of Progress Wednesday morning, an old fashioned case of horse thieving was reported to the police. No old fashioned hanging took place when the thief was caught, partly because that is out of date and principally because the man who purloins horses was an adventure seeking 15 year old school boy from Highland Park.

The boy gave his name as Jimmy Guernsey. He had been sent home from school Tuesday, but instead of going home he started on a search of adventure. Late in the afternoon he made the acquaintance of the horse, created a bridge from string and fence wire and started to ride. On Wednesday morning, when found by the police Jimmy was still on the horse, which he had "borrowed" from Joseph Victor of Buckley road near Libertyville. He had ridden all night, most of the time in the rain.

Pension List in Lake County to Be Reduced by State

Investigators will be assigned to Lake county by the state department of public welfare to reduce the list of old age pensioners now receiving benefits under the old age assistance act, it was learned this week.

The drive to reduce the number of pensioners from the present figure of 738 in the county to the maximum of 750 first estimated by the welfare department when the old age assistance act was passed is in line with the general campaign of the state department to curtail expenditures.

The state department has cut the number of pensioners from over 700 to a total of 738 for the month of May. Approximately $15,000, or an average of $11.33 per person, was issued to those pensioners from the combined state and federal pension funds.

The reason for the reduction was blamed to the action of children refusing to care for dependent parents. In a total of 745 awards made to parents, it was pointed out, who have 3533 living children, only 91 of the 2533 children were estimated as unable to contribute to the support of their parents.

Propose to Close Stores a Half-Day in Summer Months

An attempt is to be made by merchants in Park Ridge to close all business houses on Thursday afternoons during July and August. The plan is being sponsored by the Park Ridge Business association and, according to reports, has met with considerable success.

The purpose of the program it was explained, was to give store employees a half day of recreation during the week at a season of the year when business as a rule is not particularly active, and at a time when a few hours spent out-of-doors in the sunshine would mean general improvement in health.

Practical Uses of Vines for Shelter and Shade Explained

By THE MASTER GARDENER

Vines do so much to aid the home gardener in covering unsightly places, and in providing quick shade in hot sunny situations, that their importance cannot be overlooked. Aside from the attractiveness and desirability of their foliage or flowers, vines can be used to distinct advantage for many purposes, their habit of growth making them available for situations in ornamental planting where neither trees nor shrubs can be effectively substituted.

There are varieties that are suitable for every purpose—those that love shade and those that must have sun; vines that will cling to brick, stone or wood; vines that are distinctive for their flowers or fragrance; others whose foliage is the outstanding characteristic and which will make a dense screen. These should be no lack of choice in finding something suitable for the need in mind.

Remember, however, that because of their rampant growth, they take a great deal of nourishment from the soil, which must be replaced if the vine is to make a continued growth. Therefore in preparing the soil, incorporating a complete balanced plant food and feed regularly throughout the season. See that the soil is in good physical condition also. Don't sow seeds or set out plants in hard soil that bakes easily. You can incorporate humus by working peat moss into the soil. Vines should be fed with a complete plant food about every four weeks during the growing season. Work the plant food into the soil and water in well.

I list below some of the best of the annual and perennial vines, with notations as to their special uses, and cultural hints.

One of the best perennial vines for clinging to brick, stone, or wood: Boston Ivy or Japanese Creeper—will endure shade, is not often attacked by disease or insects, and the foliage is not injured by the smoke and dirt of cities. Will attain a height of 50 feet or more. Will do well in any average soil.

A perennial vine giving dense shade, one of the best vines grown where shade for porches is desired. Dutchman's Pipe—will do well in sun or shade, is resistant to disease and insects, and will endure smoke and dirt of cities. Will do well in most any soil. Has a curious bluish or a brownish shade. In the shape of a pipe. Grows to a height of 30 feet or more.

A perennial vine that will grow in sandy, poor soil, shade or sun. Lathyrus Fatifolius—perfectly hardy, has blossoms larger and more beautiful than the sweet pea, although Fragrant Fine—will cover fences or other unsightly objects. Grows to a height of 8 to 10 feet.

A fragrant flowering vine from hardy tuberous roots, which will do well in most any situation. Cinnamon Vine—a hardy sure grower under adverse conditions. Fragrance from the tiny white blossoms is similar to that of cinnamon. Never troubled by insects or disease. Tubers are hardy and increase from year to year. Dies down in fall but grows very rapidly in spring. It attains a height of 10 feet.

A perennial vine for a shady situation, inclined to spread and become naturalized, especially recommended for covering banks, hill-sides, and cuts: Hall Japanese Honeyuckle—also useful for porches, trellises, pergolas, and screen effects. Will also thrive in sun.

A perennial vine for poor soil, especially adapted to use on arbors and trellises: Silver Lace Vine—will do well where others fail. Reaches a height of 25 feet. Blooms in great sprays of white flowers, in late summer.

In the flowering perennial vines, wisteria and clematis may be had in variety.

Wisteria is very vigorous in growth, although slow to start into growth after being planted. Be sure to specify a grafted plant to be sure of bloom. A deep rich soil is preferred, the drainage should be good, and sunshine is required. Clematis require a rich light loam, well drained and limed. They are used mostly on pillars and porches and over doorways. The large flowering varieties require a little more careful culture than the small flowered clematis. Clematis must have support at the ground to prevent swaying in the wind and consequent injury to stems.

Most of the above vines can be secured from any large nursery and where plants are secured, will make good growth if set out now. All the annual vines can be sown, and here are a few very good vines.

An annual vine that succeeds best in light soil, and warm situations (a small vine for delicate effects and small porches): Balloon Vine—seed vessels look like miniature balloons. Are most enjoyed by children. Attains a height of 10 to 15 feet.

An annual vine having delicate feralike foliage and star-shaped scarlet or white flowers: Cypress Vine—will reach a height of 10 to 15 feet. Of greatest value where a fine dainty ornamental vine is desired rather than something heavy and coarse as a screen. An annual vine that will tolerate shade, although heat, insects, and drought do not affect it: Japanese Hop Vine—an extremely rapid grower and fine for covering trellises and verandas. Height, 20 to 30 feet.

California Gold First Found on Sutter Ranch

It was on the land of John Sutter, a Swiss emigrant to California, that gold was discovered. Sutter had gone there in 1839, and by the time California became United States territory following the Mexican war he was the owner of an immense tract which he called New Belvidere and which, from a "fort" located at the junction of the Sacramento and American rivers on the site of what afterward became Sacramento city, he ruled practically independent of the Mexican authorities. Sutter's fort was a sort of station for the few immigrant trains that had made their way overland to California, and about it he had gathered a number of workmen who filled his fields and cut timber in the hills to the east.

It was in digging a sluiceway for a water-power sawmill on the north fork of the American river in January, 1848, that John Marshall, who had charge of the work, discovered the dull yellow particles that in a few months were to make Sutter's land the mecca of fortune seekers the world over. Marshall had tried to keep the discovery quiet, writes R. A. Barry in the New York Herald Tribune, but his workmen, a party of Mormons from the disbanded Mormon battalion that had been a part of the army General Kearny marched overland from Santa Fe, spread the news in San Francisco and the gold rush was on.

Gold was found not only at "Horn Island," which had been formed by the construction of the millrace but along both forks of the American river as well as along its streams that paralleled the American to the north and south. That Sutter was the owner of much of the gold-bearing land did not seem to matter. Claims were staked by all comers, and Sutter was left to petition congress for some sort of redress—which was never granted.

Children and Gardens

By AGNES COGGINS

"Wasn't this afternoon's discussion stimulating!" Mrs. Johnson remarked as she drove her friend and next door neighbor, Mrs. Brown, home from the Thursday meeting of the Garden club. "I want to begin work this spring on that colonial arrangement of old-fashioned flowers."

"Honestly, Grace," Mrs. Brown sighed, "I don't see how you manage so well with your garden—two little children. I seem to have to sacrifice one or the other. Don and Bob ruin the garden—cut through the flower beds when they're playing, use them for hiding places during games."

"Well, why don't you?" "Oh, I know what you're going to say, but fences are no good either. We tried that one year. Don swung on the wire until the whole thing was torn down. I don't believe they mean to be bad, but I'm afraid they're hopeless. I've done everything. I've scolded, coaxed, punished and tried in every way to keep them away from the flowers; it's no use."

"Oh, Jane, you shouldn't have tried to keep them away from the flowers. You enjoy playing; let them enjoy it, too. Why not encourage their working in the garden? I really mean working! Why Joan and Dick, even though they are only five, have their own plot of ground. Their daddy loaned the dirt for them first, but they dug, too, with the shovels they asked us to give them for birthday presents last year."

"They asked for shovels?" "Of course. They do all the planting, too, and arrange the beds to suit themselves. Sometimes, I admit, results wouldn't be in harmony with the artistic conception of a landscape gardener, but we hope that the mistakes, apparent even to them, will be corrected as time goes on. Anyhow, the work is their own and if it's wrong, they know they made it that way. And if it turns out well and they have real bumper crops of beans, lettuce or nasturtiums, they know they are responsible for that, too, and they are as proud and glad as you are when your dinner party's a success."

"Well, it sounds too good to be true, but I'm willing to try. I suppose I should get some seeds first."

problems. The solving of these leads the child into new fields of exploration and endeavor.

HIGHWAYS for SAFETY AND SERVICE

Why Issue Bonds for Roads? By C. C. WILEY

Associate Professor of Highway Engineering, University of Illinois. There has been and still is a great deal of controversy over the relative merits of a "bond issue" and a "pay-as-you-go" plan for building roads. Most of this is needless if the conditions confronting the particular community are fully considered.

Suppose that a man desires to build a new home. Does he build a piece this year, another next year, and so on until at the end of six or seven years the house is done and he can move in? He must certainly do so. Instead, he borrows the money to build the house as a single unit, in a single season so that he and his family can then enjoy all the comforts and conveniences of the new home during the possibly eight years required to pay for it.

Exactly the same condition can confront a township, a county or a state. Let us suppose that a county needs 100 miles of improved roads to serve its people, but the county revenue is only sufficient to build 6 to 7 miles a year. By the pay-as-you-go plan fifteen years would be required to build the 100 miles. During all this time only part of the system would be available and traffic would have not been adequately served. At the end of 20 years the entire system would have been available for only 5 years.

By issuing bonds the inconvenience to construction would last but three years and the entire 100 miles would be available for 17 out of the 20 years required to pay for them. The total cost would be greater but would it not be worth the money to have the roads available? In fact the only real question in considering a bond issue is whether or not the immediate availability of the roads justifies the additional cost in the form of interest.

In 1915, Vermillion county, Illinois, astounded the nation by issuing $2,000,000 in bonds to build a county-wide system of high-type roads. In 1935 the last of the bonds were retired. The entire system of roads had been in service for nearly fifteen years adding to the safety, comfort, convenience and prosperity of the people while paying the bills. It was estimated that the roads were still in better than 90 percent good condition. Thus the people of that county by issuing bonds had had all of the benefits of good roads while paying for them. They will continue to enjoy them for years to come and will then hand on to their children.

a substantial portion of the system for their further benefit and profit.

The Spatulate Hand

The spatulate hand is a crooked, irregular kind of hand with fingers, which spread at the tips into pads or knobs rather like the nose on an engineer's hammer. This shows one to be the active, nervous kind of person with a prodigious capacity for work, into which you fling yourself wholeheartedly. Emotional and demonstrative, asserts a writer in Pearson's London Weekly Magazine, you are bound only by the rules and conventions which you, yourself, choose to make. Inventive, original and frequently brilliant, you are apt to live on your "nerves" and (if your wrist is narrow) should guard against over-exercising yourself and also against over-in-pulsiveness.

LOOK BEFORE YOU LEAP

Those who think our American form of government should be tossed aside so we may join other nations in experimenting would do well to study a couple of recent news dispatches from Europe.

One, from Moscow, quoted the Soviet newspaper mouth-piece, Pravda, as delivering a blast against southern government leaders because only 1,750,000 acres of wheat had been planted on Soviet farms. The warning, naturally, was intended as a threat of official investigation, and executions, unless farmers toe the mark. That is communism.

The second, and equally pertinent dispatch, was from Berlin. It reported two things: (a) That the standard weekly wage for skilled workmen in Germany is $8 to $9 a week, and (b) That the government has issued official orders forbidding anyone to change jobs simply for the purpose of making more money. That is nazism!

Of course, the "sit-down" strikes—the unlawful seizure of somebody else's property—won't win this nation any praise in future histories. But at the same time the farmer is not threatened with execution because he does not plant as much wheat as his government wants him to. The worst we have done is to try to bribe the farmer not to plant as much as they used to.

Furthermore, every American retains the right to work for whom he pleases, change jobs when he wishes, do what he can to improve his standing in life.

It is an attested fact that some "sit-down" leaders have insisted we should turn communist or fascist or nazi. We wonder if they have ever thought how long they would survive if they openly advocated "sitdown" strikes in Berlin or Moscow or Rome? But apparently they care nothing for facts; they certainly aren't bothered by laws.

SOCIAL JUSTICE AND RADICALISM

"What is social justice? Is it not an ideal of radicals? Are radicals not correctly defined as being 'failures who wish to share in the success of others'?"

These questions, addressed to Dr. Lewis Haney, professor of economics at New York university, were answered by him as follows, in his column in the "New York American."

"All justice is social, since it involves the relative treatment of different individuals. The tacking of the word 'social' onto the word 'justice', therefore, shows that some special meaning is attached to the words.

"Ordinarily, full justice is done when (1) each individual is given an equal chance to show what he can do; and (2) each individual is protected in the possession of all things that he has through his own efforts . . .

"A radical is one who favors revolutionary changes in social institutions or arrangements, usually for the purpose of seeking some ideal of his own. Radicalism always fails in the end for either one of two reasons: It either does not allow for the fixed limitations and laws of human nature; or it does not allow for the fixed limitations and laws of the world outside.

"Social justice" need not be a radical concept. As I define it above, it is not. As a slogan, however, it is apt to indicate radicalism. . . . It then comes to mean that someone is trying to force his own ideals as to what is just, upon his fellow men.

"In Russia, Germany and France, for example, we see much of this."

THE DAY OF LITTLE BUSINESS

It is often argued that the development of large businesses—especially in the retail field—has tended to destroy the little businesses and to make it next to impossible for a man without vast capital to set up his own establishment.

This argument has strong appeal—but apparently facts contradict it.

During the depression, thousands of little businesses sprung up in the country—largely because of the difficulties of individuals in finding employment. These little businesses offer specialized services, or lower prices, or were the outgrowth of a new idea of some kind. Many of them found a ready welcome, and have prospered. With the return of better times, they are going ahead—and in due course a percentage of them will become big businesses.

Some of these little businesses failed—because they provided poor service, or did not fill a definite need. But many a large business has failed for the same reasons.

One has only to look around any growing community today to see a legion of opportunities in retail lines for young men and women who are willing to work, and realize that riches can't be earned overnight. Even as changing times made necessary big business combinations to serve the public, so the evolutionary process has created a hundred opportunities for the small retail businesses where one existed a generation ago.

The day of little business isn't done—it is just beginning.—The Chemung Valley Reporter, N. Y.

People go to war to decide which is right, but the only thing they find out is who is left.

WHAT'S GOING ON IN WASHINGTON

(Courtesy The United States News)

When President Roosevelt returned to Washington on May 14 to take up the tangled reins of national leadership, he was in a position to think back on three other home-comings, similar to this one but presenting striking contrasts.

In each case congressional action had more or less stalled, waiting for decisions by the president. The situation strikes to the heart of American government practice, raising this problem: "Who should be the real leader of the country in legislation, congress or the president?"

During the first session of congress in the Roosevelt administration, the president stuck to his desk. That was the famous 100-day session of 1933, when the desperate economic condition of the country called for unrelenting efforts on the part of all public servants.

But the next year, Mr. Roosevelt went to Florida on a fishing trip, leaving congress to struggle with numerous pieces of legislation, including a new revenue measure. Possibly he hoped thus to avoid any possible resentment of congress arising from the charge that he was beginning to be heard—"rubber-stamp congress." The word dictatorship was being used to describe the Roosevelt pressure on congress.

But his return that year partook of the nature of a triumphal entry into the capital. A delegation from congress welcomed him back to unravel legislation from the snarl into which it had got without a guiding hand from the white house.

Mr. Roosevelt declared he had learned from the barracuda and the sharks. "I am a tough guy," he explained. Inside of two weeks agreement had been reached on the revenue measure and other bills.

were proceeding through the legislative mill.

The next year there was no welcoming delegation. But on the very evening of his return from a trip to Florida, Mr. Roosevelt called on congressional leaders into conference at the white house. The Social Security bill at that time had been buried for months in committee, with opposing groups tugging this way and that to get their own ideas incorporated. Within a few days this measure was reported out.

Last year on his return from a fishing trip in the Bahamas Islands, Mr. Roosevelt found congress less burdened with controversial measures. The elections were in the offing with the new deal preparing to go to the country for a vote of confidence. The message on the corporate profits tax had not yet been sent to the hill.

What is the picture today?

In the first place, however far-reaching the measures with which congress has been tussling in the previous years, those before it now far outweigh them in eventual importance. There is the court reform bill and the measure for reorganizing the executive branch of the government. Budget plans are out of gear and the president's request for a drastic cut in expenditures leaves individual congressional members in favor of saving on all measures except those in which they are interested.

Since Mr. Roosevelt's departure congress has been doing little more than marking time, with a gesture toward economy here and an offer of increase in appropriations there. Revolt has grown against administrative measures and their supporters are at sea on the question of whether to accept compromises for the sake of progress. Particularly is this true regarding the court reform bill, on which an unfavorable senate committee report is expected on May 15.

Government economy may be of two kinds—short range and long range. Congress gave its attention to the long-range variety last week and voted to save money in one direction and to spend more in another.

The presumptive saving was in the hope's refusal to make the civilian conservation corps a permanent agency of the government, costing about 200 million dollars yearly. The cost of the corps was extended by two years only in the bill as adopted.

The senate, on the other hand, voted $2,700,000 to enable the TVA to begin construction on the Giffordville dam in Kentucky, which will eventually cost 115 million dollars. The proposed site is at the mouth of the Tennessee river where it empties into the Ohio.

The house's action amounted to a denial of the president's request that this "peace army" should be made a permanent institution to engage in warfare against enemies of forests and other natural resources. While the measure was being debated in the house, a senate committee reported favorably a bill to carry out the president's recommendations.

Told of the house's action, President Roosevelt commented that the important thing was to extend the CCC's existence.

The total paid to these young men in the last four years has been 461 million dollars, from which sum 363 million dollars was sent to support needy relatives.

Two large purposes were embraced in the original establishment of the CCC in April, 1933. The more urgent of the purposes was to provide work for young men belonging to needy families. Enrollees between 17 and 23 years were chosen from families on relief and were paid $10 a month, of which $25 might be sent home to their families.

The other chief purpose was improvement in public forest lands, the combating of pests, fighting forest fires and preventing erosion of soil.

"Sun Drawing Water"
Water is evaporated by heat and is incorporated in the atmosphere. The optical illusion of the sun "drawing water" is only the common phenomenon of rays of light reflected in dust particles floating in the air, making them visible when the sun shines behind clouds.

The Herring Gull
The Herring gull is one of the commonest aquatic birds of the Great Lakes district. They are especially attached to the many commercial fishing ports where they find plenty of fish food and wastes from commercial fishing operations.

Lindbergh's 'Partner'

THE "Spirit of St. Louis", the other half of the famous Lindbergh team—"W"—will be visited by more than 25,000 Boy Scouts of all parts of the nation when they converge on Washington, D. C., for their first National Jamboree, June 30 to July 9, on their own 350-acre tented city on both sides of the Potomac River.

The famous plane, in which Col. Lindbergh made his epic flight from New York to Paris ten years ago May 21, is housed at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington where Boy Scouts are shown hanging by the craft. The St. Louis Jamboree Contingent will make a special pilgrimage to the plane.

Holstein Breeders Plan Cattle Show

The Holstein cattle breeders located in Lake and Cook counties have completed plans for a one-day "Black & White" show to be held June 19 at Hillside picnic grounds, located one-half mile north of Grayslake on route 54. Each Holstein breeder in the territory is requested to bring to the show a few of his best cattle, where they will be judged by an expert. Demonstrations will be held to illustrate the value of improved breeding through the use of superior sires and foundation females. Judging contests will be held which will be open to everyone. A picnic dinner will be enjoyed at noon by all of the Holstein breeders, their families and friends. The program for the day is essentially educational in nature and it will pay everyone who is interested in the dairy business to be present.

This "Black & White" show is sponsored by the Lake County Holstein club, Herman Dunker, president, and Charles Wray, secretary.

The committees which are in charge of the various phases of the show are:

Believe Centralized Relief Bill Will Be Defeated This Week

Charging that the Martin-Ad- amski centralized relief bill would place politically professional social workers in control of relief, the legislative committee of the State Association of County Officers ap- peared before the legislature Wed- nesday. H. D. Kelsey of Barrington is the chairman of the com- mittee.

According to news reports from Springfield, the heavy opposition of the county officers may have sufficient influence to kill the bill. With dozens of major propo- sals, including all of the appropria- tions and most of the administra- tive program, still to be acted upon, the belief grew that it would be increasingly difficult for meas- ures such as the new relief pro- gram to be advanced. Local officials speaking at the relief hearing included Judge Wil- liam G. Knoeb of Naperville, H. D. Kelsey of Lake county, James R. Cannell of Rockford, William Propger of Harvey and S. Water- fall of DuPage county.

The fire was centered on the plan to have a county commission head the local welfare department, which would have relief authority over the supervisor-overseer of the poor when state or federal money is involved.

Mrs. Beckman is Better
Friends in Barrington have re- ceived news from South Bend, Ind. that Mrs. William Beckman who has a surgical patient at the Epworth hospital in that city is improving slowly. Pneumonia developed fol- lowing two mastoid operations and Mrs. Beckman's condition was re- ported to be critical last week.

Is Operated at Elgin

Mrs. E. G. Komper, 421 E. Washington street, underwent a major operation at the Sherman hospital, Elgin Monday morning.
