High During August Despite July Slump

Despite July Siump

In spite of the heat and humidity, suburban building in the Chicago region jumped out of the doldrums in August in a most surprising way, with permits issued to the amount of $4.102,378, as survey by Straus Securities company of Chicago revealed. Only one other four million dollar month appears in the records of this survey since 1330, that month being April of this year with $4,424,193. Since April the failing off had been steady and July had dropped to $2,486,129. The August total represents a grain of $5 per cent over August of last year which was only $2,013,115.
