SOCIAL SECURITY OR INSECURITY

The supreme court has just upheld a statute designed to protect American workers against unemployment and a helpless old age—the social security act. A little impartial thinking must raise doubts as to whether that "security" is as "secure" as we would like to believe.

In the first place, employers will, through taxes, provide two-thirds of the money set aside for old-age pensions and unemployment insurance. The employees will contribute the other one-third. It behooves us, therefore, to consider the steadiness of the source of the two-thirds of the money.

Isn't it logical to assume that social security isn't secure unless the employers are secure? If the employers are forced out of business, where will the money come from?

When times are good, there will be little to worry about. But congress has enacted another law which strongly discourages the creation of reserves to pull manufacturers through hard times. It has, in fact, levied heavy punitive taxes on such reserves. It is an admitted fact that few employers, when another depression comes along, will have enough reserves to let them spend more than $26,000,000,000 out of their savings as they have done in recent years. They won't have the savings.

Furthermore, it is now proposed to lay new and heavier burdens upon them by adopting a shorter week so as to spread employment. Unless an employer who hires five men to do the work that four did before increases the cost of what he sells, he will be put out of business. If he does increase the cost, he will have trouble selling, and maybe again put out of business.

When tax sources dry up, there are no taxes. Unless the sources of taxes are secure, there can be no social security.

swim, the contest will not seem one-sided. If caught, the bird will be carried by the animal without being harmed in any way.

These dogs carry objects so gently that they are taught to remove whole nests of eggs, one at a time, without breaking an egg. Their acts have been approved by the humane society. Retrieving coins from the bottom of a water tank is another trick performed by these hunters. The retriever exhibits in no way resembles the vaudeville acts in which dogs jump through hoops and climb ladders. Mr. Hogan explained. It can no more be compared to a vaudeville canine act than the Kentucky Derby can be compared to a pony act in a circus.

In addition to more than 100 commercial exhibits, several educational and hobby exhibits have been arranged. Persons interested in amateur photography have been invited to enter the picture contest conducted by Dr. Earl Kleinwachter. Pictures may be left or mailed for entry at the Barrington Review office prior to the week of the show. It is open to anyone living in the northwest suburban area.

Cash prizes will be given away in a non-lottery plan to guests of the festival. A Plymouth deluxe automobile also will be given away. Many valuable souvenirs will be given to all visitors at commercial booths, but no merchandise will be sold to them. A very nominal admission will be charged. No entry into the main tent, for other charges of any kind will be made.
