

Legion Program at Heights Sunday Is Attended by Many

Approximately 100 representatives from "boy scout," cub pack, campfire girls and girl scout troops and the Barrington school band, in addition to a large group of adults, attended the American Legion Youth and American Legion program at Arlington Heights Sunday afternoon. The event was sponsored by area one of the ninth district, which includes the Barrington post.

The Barrington school band led the parade, which consisted of over 300 representatives of youth organizations, Legionnaires, Legion Auxiliary, Sons of the Legion, and color bearers. The line of march was from the Merle Guild post club rooms in Arlington Heights to the high school. George Rohde, ninth district commander, opened the meeting and colors were then posted, followed by the singing of "America." Arthur C. Martens, commander of the Barrington post, then led Legion and Auxiliary members in the recitation of the preamble of the American Legion constitution.

The camp fire girls were recited by members of Barrington, Mt. Prospect and Arlington Heights organizations. The Barrington and the Mt. Prospect bands sang the "Old Miltie Blues" as their part of the program.

Paul Armstrong, past Illinois department commander, gave the principal address. He spoke on combating juvenile delinquencies by fostering youth organizations, citing instances and statistics to illustrate why the rate is lowered when controlled programs are given children. Following the principal speaker, a short program concluded the meeting. Musical selections were played on the school lawn later by the bands and drum and bugle corps.

T. B. Treatment Is National Campaign, States School Nurse

Tuberculosis has dropped from first to seventh place since 1907 as the leading cause of death in the United States, officials of the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute declared today in connection with their 11th Annual "Early Diagnosis" campaign.

Yet in spite of modern means and methods of detection and treatment, tuberculosis still ranks in first place as a killer of youth, Miss Edith McLaughlin, R. N., at the public school pointed out. It claims more victims between the ages of 15 and 45 years than any other disease, she stated.

Tuberculosis associations and public health authorities are emphasizing early discovery of the disease as a means to bring about a cure or arrestment. The "Early Diagnosis" campaign is being sponsored nationally by more than 2,000 state, county and local tuberculosis organizations.

In Barrington the program is being sponsored by the Barrington school affiliated with the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute. The program locally has two main divisions: health education, by means of literature distribution, motion pictures and lecture exhibits, radio talks and newspaper articles and clinical service. This includes tuberculin skin testing, X-rays, physical examinations and inspections. The institute's staff includes a staff of 25 registered nurses, a medical director, chief clinician and X-ray technician conduct monthly chest clinics at the institute's 17 suburban health centers.

P-T.A. Officers to Be Installed at Program

The program will be given in three divisions consisting of displays offered by the home economics junior high students, clothing classes, and advanced home economics students. Ruby Kuehn will play the piano during the first division and Mary Jane Blanke during the latter two.

In the first division Mary Ellen Galt will introduce the problem of aprons. Frances Platteau will discuss the problem of smocks, blouses and pajamas, and Gladys Truax the problem of dresses. The junior high girls in this division will model the clothes they have made in these groups.

In the second division Gloria Stanley will present aprons, blouses, pajamas, smocks, and blouses. Barbara Watson will present dresses, and Doris Lovendahl better dresses. Students from the classes these four girls represent will model their handiwork.

The advanced class will end the show with Ruth Dwyer introducing simple garments, Alice Bauman made-over problems, Margaret Ann Sheehy the child's division, and Betty Lee McCray better garments.

Motorcycle Crashes Claim One Life and Injure Three Others

Motorcycle accidents in the vicinity over the week-end claimed the life of one rider and injured three others.

Ralph McClellan, 25 years old, 1311 Forster avenue, West, Wis., was fatally injured Saturday evening when he lost control of his machine on route 20 west of Elgin and crashed into a ditch. William Moon, 32 years old, also of West, who was riding tandem with McClellan, was thrown to the pavement and received a concussion of the brain.

Gordon Laughhead, 16 years old, of Glenview, received bruises and lacerations about the face and head Sunday morning when his motorcycle was struck by an automobile driven by Ward Conde, 725 Ashland avenue, Chicago, at the intersection of routes 25 and 63 at Bonnie Dundee golf course.

Laughhead was riding east on route 63 and State Highway Parkway Herbert Wright, who investigated the accident, reported Conde failed to observe the stop sign at the intersection. Conde also received minor injuries.

The other credits injured was Richard Speake, 45 years old, of Crystal Lake, who stated that he swerved the motorcycle he was riding over a curb to avoid being hit by a car at Crystal Lake Saturday night. The machine struck a tree.

Speake received a fractured right ankle and compound fracture of the right arm. In addition to lacerations and bruises.

New Men's Manager

Robert Edwards, formerly of Rockford, has moved to Barrington where he is manager of the meat department at the A. & P. store. Byron Chastain, who had been manager for about a year, will be transferred to another store.

This WEEK in WASHINGTON

By RALPH E. CHURCH
Representative, 10th Congressional District

Washington, D. C., April 23.—Our whole national life is suffering from bureaucracy. It is a deadly disease, cancerous in nature, which attaches itself to the body politic and ultimately results in the complete destruction of democratic life. It eats up the nation's resources, taking more and more money from the individual taxpayer.

It stifles economic growth, preventing the flow of capital in the blood stream of private enterprise. It slowly destroys the moral fibre of a nation.

Against the dangers of this disease the American people should be warned. A cure is difficult, it requires time, patience and courage. Already it has reached a malignant stage, and to effect a cure we should be aroused.

It was with this thought in mind that I saw fit to publicly criticize the actions of Horace Russell, general counsel of the Home Owners' Loan corporation, on the floor of the house this week. I express the sincere hope that this criticism and his immediate resignation will serve, in some measure at least, to focus public attention on the evils and dangers of this growing bureaucracy. The Russell case is but an illustration of that which is taking place all through the federal service.

When Judge O. B. Taylor resigned as associate counsel of the Home Owners' Loan corporation to enter into private law practice in Washington, his superior (Mr. Russell) would be perfectly justified in expressing officially his regret in losing Judge Taylor's services and commending him for his work with the corporation. But that is something altogether different from the thing alloted to the recipient of a letter in his official capacity all over the United States, at expense to the taxpayers, which is often suggested to the recipient that he had any Washington law business.

E. G. Ericson Buys House in Jewel Park

E. G. Ericson, manager of the Pure Oil Service station, Main and Hough streets, was reported this week as purchaser of the Colonial house on Elm avenue in Jewel Park, which was offered for sale under a unique plan several months ago. The purchase price was reported at $1800.

When first offered for sale by the First National Bank, it was proposed that the price would be cut $500 each, succeeding month, and the use of cars during our recent bereavement.

Card of Thanks
We wish to thank neighbors and friends for their kind expressions of sympathy, floral tributes, and the use of cars during our recent bereavement.
Mrs. William Dobson and family.

"A Scientific Attitude"

By JANETTE S. MURRAY

The fourth grade pupils had just been dismissed. As Jean Marshall went out, she setted the hand of Betty Crew and pinched it with all her might. Shocked and physically hurt, Betty ran home crying. Her mother called Mrs. Marshall on the phone and angrily informed her of Jean's action.

Now mothers instinctively side with their own children, but Mrs. Marshall belonged to a study group, where there was a frank discussion of children's faults and where the old idea that one's child "can do no wrong" had been superseded by a more scientific attitude.

Naturally, Mrs. Marshall was shocked at Jean's action but collected herself enough to say she deeply regretted such behavior on her daughter's part, that she did not understand it and that she would talk to Jean, who was not home yet, and call back to see if they could do anything toward making the matter right.

Jean, when questioned, was so sorry for having given in to such a bad impulse. The child said she had nothing against Betty but was suddenly seized with a wild desire to pinch, just to see how it would seem. Now, Jean began to cry. Her mother was taking such a grave view of the affair.

"Don't cry, Jean," said Mrs. Marshall. "You have to think how to make amends." She studied her little daughter thoughtfully. "Suppose I call up Betty's mother and explain how you did it and how wrong we think it was and say you would like to apologize if Betty could come to the phone—or what do you want to do?"

"Oh, I'd like to do that, Mother," and Jean dried her tears.

Mrs. Crew was, of course, decidedly placated by Mrs. Marshall's ready acknowledgment of her daughter's fault. Yes, she would call Betty at once.

"Betty," said Jean, "I'm sorry and ashamed that I pinched your hand. Will you forgive me? I'll never do it again. Won't you tell your mother what I've said? I'll hold the wire."

After a few moments, "It's all right, Jean," came over the line from Betty.

And so the trouble was over. With the affair settled promptly and off her mind, Betty held no grudge. As for Jean, she promised her mother never to do such a thing again, and she was so glad once she got out her best doll's dress to take to school to give Betty the next day, for she knew it would fit one of Betty's prettiest dolls. Then she has happily out of doors to play.

It would have been so easy through weak handling on Mrs. Marshall's part to have let this chance fault of a normal, well-meaning child cause lasting unhappiness for both girls; but, as we have seen, Mrs. Marshall settled the affair in a straightforward way, she admitted her little fault at once and then stood by, loyally, helping Jean to make amends.
