The Barrington fall festival will be held from October 4 to 8 inclusive, if the large tent to house it is available that week, members of the club decided at their weekly meeting Monday night.

Arnold H. Bass, chairman of the tent committee, expected to complete arrangements for the top Thursday. In case it is not available October 4 to 8, the festival will be held a week earlier.

Members of the space committee are busy calling on merchants to sell booths for the show.

Asia First Home of Most of Domesticated Animals

Man has domesticated animals since his earliest days—before he learned to write, for among his earliest records are found drawings and other representations of some of the animals he had taken into his camps and dwelling places.

The continent of Asia seems to have been the place of origin of three-fourths of our domestic animals. Since the first home of man himself is usually also placed there it is not surprising.

It seems probable that all of these animals were first held captive by the early peoples for their food supply and that the others used for riding, for drawing loads, etc.—occurred to their captors afterward.

It is interesting to note that no new domestic animals have been developed in several thousand years, as far as records show, since a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The llama, the alpaca and the turkey have become known to European peoples within that time, but they had long been in use among the inhabitants of the mountains of Asia.

Cats, camels, most domestic cattle, horses, goats, sheep and most poultry are apparently Asiatic in origin. Dogs are perhaps of doubtful origin, too, although this is less certain. The ass may have come from northern Africa, the reindeer from northern Europe.

Social Security Service

Albert S. Lewis, manager of the Chicago office of the social security board, will be in Barrington from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., Thursday, Aug. 11, with office at the village hall. He will be of service to employees and employers who require information or assistance pertaining to the social security act.

Drafting Program for Community Event

Committee appointments by Mr. Calkins, who is general chairman, last Monday night were as follows: T. E. Davis, program; Harry H. Wewetter, Harold P. Garbe, exhibitor; A. H. Bass, cooperation.

Willard Watson and Paul E. Clark, supervisors of the community play program, will be in charge of the games and races during the afternoon. Children may make their registrations in the various events with these two men next week, it was reported.

The publicity committee consists of Clayton Watkins, George Elliott and V. Gallagher. Local organizations will be invited to take part in arranging the schedule.

The purpose of arranging an all-community program and picnic was discussed by Mr. Calkins, who stated the park board desired to acquaint residents of the community with the many features the two local parks have to offer for recreation purposes. He listed the playground and play apparatus in the park, the street playground and the four baseball diamonds, football field, running track, picnic grounds and other features in Northside park as available assets that have not been used to capacity by residents of Barrington.

Weather in a Teacup

Here is a peculiar way of telling whether a day is going to be fine or wet. Drop a lump of sugar into a cup of tea, and watch the behavior of the bubbles as they rise to the surface. If they appear as tiny drops hurrying to the side of the cup, there to disappear, then the day will be fine. Should the bubbles grow large and float in the center of the cup, then the day will be rainy. A writer in Pearson's London Weekly answers: The behavior of the bubbles is due to the pressure of the air. When this is high—in fine weather—the bubbles burst quickly; when low, and rain is near, the bubbles remain intact for an appreciable time.

Practice Makes Perfect

By Little M. Sanders

"Mrs. Martin, I wish you would tell me how you have taught Mariel such perfect manners. I tell Ruth over and over what to do and what not to do, but still her lack of even common politeness shocks me dreadfully some times." The plea was made by young Mrs. Neal, the mother of a lively six-year-old girl.

"Certainly, I will tell you. Or instead, I'll show you, if you will just step into the dining room and find a seat where you will not be seen through this open door. Mariel will be more natural if we are alone."

Mrs. Martin, too, was a young mother, but one who had made a study and real art of motherhood.

As her caller left the room, Mrs. Martin stepped to a door which opened onto a side porch, and stood watching her child, busy with the diminutive household in a playroom on the screened-in porch. A rich growth of ornamental vines served as a protection from the intense rays of the early summer sun.

Mariel's eyes met her mother's with a look of inquiry. "Don't you want to bring your fancy-work and come and visit with me for awhile, dear?" asked the mother.

"I'll be glad to, Mother, just as soon as I change Mariel's dress." She picked up her doll and replaced the little print dress with a dainty little dress, put the doll in its carriage, and advancing to the open door, knocked.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Martin had returned to her seat in the living room. In answer to the knock, she went to the door, saying, "Oh, how-do-you-do, Mrs. Jones. Will you come in?"

"Thank you, Mrs. Martin. My baby is asleep, so I'll leave her out here in the shade," replied Mariel, as she entered the room, carrying her work-basket.

"Take this chair by the window, Mrs. Jones. It seems to be a little cooler here. May I take her hat?"

"Yes, Mrs. Martin, thank you. The sunshine is so warm today."

"It is. And one feels the first warm days of summer very much. Would you like to have a drink of cool water?"

"If you please, Mrs. Martin."

The mother brought the refreshing drink and was thanked. As she again seated herself, she said, "I see you have your sewing with you. What are you making?"

"A quilt for Mariel's bed. I'm cross-stitching it. Look, and she held out a square of gingham stretched over a small embroidery hoop. A partly worked design was marked on the square.

"Oh, how pretty that will be!" exclaimed Mrs. Martin.

The visit continued as between two grown friends. Mariel awakened, was taken into the living room and properly admired and discussed.

After a time Mrs. Martin said softly, "Mariel, will you excuse me now, please?"

Mariel properly took her leave, after cordially inviting Mrs. Martin to visit her soon.

After the child had again become absorbed in her play, Mrs. Martin smiling invited her caller to examine her seat in the living room.

"Oh, Mrs. Martin, that was wonderful! It is not surprising that Mariel has such charming manners. Do you always talk about the same things?"

"Oh, no, and next time Mariel will be hostess. Sometimes, she serves a lunch and I am the guest. At other times she is the guest. If she makes a mistake, I call her by her own name, and correct her, in an undertone. On each visit I stress some phase of good breeding. Today, it was solicitation for another's comfort. I am teaching Mariel that true politeness is showing consideration for others."

"Thank you so much for your help, Mrs. Martin. Ruth will enjoy 'visiting' with me this way, I know."

Distributed "Mourning Rings"

In George Washington's day the curious custom of distributing "mourning rings" among relatives and close friends was common. When a person felt that he had only a short while to live he would order a supply of rings made up, into which could be inserted strands of hair. A Smithsonian Institution collection contains several "mourning rings" of less notable individuals of Revolutionary days. The strands of hair in the Washington ring are gray. Washington in his younger days had sandy hair.

How High is a Tree?

Did you ever want to know how high a tree was without going to the trouble of going to the top with a yard-stick or tape measure? It can be done all from the ground, says Harold's Dairyman. Set up a stick straight from the ground and measure the length of the shadow it casts. Now measure the length of the shadow of the tree. Multiply the length of the tree shadow by the height of the stick. Divide this figure by the length of the shadow of the stick and you have the height of the tree.

College for Poor White Orphans
Girard College at Philadelphia, Pa., is an institution for the vocational education and maintenance of poor white male orphans; as the donor of the trust fund expressed it. The college was founded under the will of Stephen Girard and opened January 1, 1841. By a provision in the will no ecclesiastical, missionary, or minister of any sect whatever is permitted to hold office in this institution or to enter its premises at any time or for any reason. That provision should, however, not be interpreted as a rejection upon any sect or person; on the contrary, the founder's desire was, as he himself stated, simply that the minds of the boys reared by the institution should be kept free from the confusion of denominational controversies so that on their entrance into active life they may adopt such religious tenets as their natural reason may enable them to prefer. The purest principles of morality were to be inculcated into the minds of the scholars.

Owls That Are Beneficial

The owls of the country, which have been set aside as beneficial, are the barn owl, eastern screech owl, snowy owl, western burrowing owl, Northern barred owl, great gray owl, long-eared owl, short-eared owl and saw-whet owl. Only the great-horned owl has been adjudged harmful. Since this owl is some 100 common, one would do well to leave all of the owl well enough alone. They have a record for destroying vermin that is little less than amazing.
