

"Four Daughters"

Will Show Here Sunday, Monday

"Blockade" With Madeline Carroll, at Catlow Wednesday

Boys will be boys whether they are playing baseball in a sand lot or acting in the movies!

The "Dead End" kids demonstrated that fact while working in "Little Tough Guy," the vivid drama of youth, at the Catlow theatre Friday and Saturday, with Helen Farish, Robert Wilcox and Jackie Baur featured.

Within two hours after the "Dead End" kids had arrived at the studio, they had made the acquaintance of the studio fire chief, and persuaded him to let them ride on the big fire truck. There was really a lot to see as they would operate the siren.

When the boys tired of foot races, boxing matches, and various "pranks" between scenes, they were away able to think up something new to worry producer Ken Goldsmith and Harold Young, the director.

The girls got their innings this week when "Four Daughters," opened at the Catlow theatre on Sunday.

Priscilla, Rosemary and La La Lank! Hollywood's only three sister stars, and Gale Page, a lovely Spoken newcomer, have the title role, and it is around them that the bright and charming story revolves. The daughters of an adroit musician, played by Claude Rains, there are all the joys and sorrows of small-town girls whose lives are full of work and play, dreams and ambition.

Of course where they are four pretty girls, four young men are likely to put in an appearance. And they do, in the person of Jeffery Lynn, a handsome screen newcomer who seems destined for stardom; John Garfield, a young character actor recruited from Broadway; and the Group theatre, Dick Foran and Frank McHugh. May Robinson is on the spot to act as chaperon.

The ghost town of Gleason, Ariz. saw its first activity in many years when Producer Harry Sherman arrived there to film scenes for his new outdoor romance, "The Mysterious Rider," which comes to the Catlow Tuesday.

Since the Zane Grey story of life in the frontier West required a town in the same stage it was during the West's wildest era, Gleason was selected as typical of a rapidly-vanishing type of community.

Double featured Tuesday with "The Mysterious Rider," is "Time Out for Murder," with Robert Murray, Michael Whalen and Chick Chandler.

On Wednesday for one day only, the feature is the presentation of "Blockade," starring Madeline Carroll and Henry Fonda.
